

cies (where surface waves also propagate for long distances). The formalism can be further extended to predict the beam formation in new types of quantum cascade lasers [9], and in other structures where the emission pattern is formed by partial scattering of guided modes. A wide class of materials and devices where similar phenomena are expected to take place includes photonic crystals, and other metamaterials- as well as composite structures with typical inhomogeneity lengths scales comparable to wavelength.

6. Acknowledgements

This work was supported by ONR (# N00014-07-1-0457), NSF (#ECCS-0724763), AFRL (#FA8650-08-C-1445), and the AFOSR Young Investigator Program (#FA9550-10-1-0226).